

Students Break Into Song

A few weeks ago, I opened up the class by teaching my students the song "Kookaburra". I decided that for consistency sake, it would be best to teach the same song across multiple classes so that I might gauge their progress through a common song. I heard from one of the teachers that at the end of the week, the 4-6 class (who loves to sing) broke out into the song I had taught in the middle of the cafeteria, and that the K-3 class and the 7-8 class had started singing along, in a round. Just because they thought it was fun. I hope that they continue to have such enthusiasm over the course of the year.